

STEVE MANSSELL

PEOPLE WITH LEARNING DISABILITIES

I would like to be on the LDE Representative Body because I feel passionately about helping others, and about changing people's attitudes about people who have a learning disability.

I believe that everyone deserves a voice, and I would work hard to make sure the voices of people with learning disabilities are heard.

It is imperative that people with learning disabilities play a leading role in society and I endeavour to champion their good work.

I think that Hate Crime towards disabled people should be taken more seriously by the police. I also think that everybody who wants a job should be able to have one.

I have skills and experiences that would be good for this role. I have had a job at Tesco for 29 years. I have been a Trustee of My Life My Choice for 5 years, and co-facilitate the Abingdon self-advocacy group. I have represented the charity at events such as a reception at 10 Downing Street (following our big Society Award) and Buckingham Palace (following our Queen's Award for Voluntary Service).

I am friendly and approachable, and if I am elected will want to meet as many of you as possible and find out your views.

Steve is standing for election to represent his self-advocacy group My Life My Choice.
